All the gun circles on the river front have been relaid so as to be made adaptable for larger guns. The balance of the guns will remain as they were formerly designed—on barbette.

FROM PORT ROYAL.

Loss of the Steamer Boston.

A correspondent of the New York Times forwarded the following account of the loss of the steamer Boston, already alluded to in a dispatch:

Capt. F. M. Fairchild, of the Boston, had received instructions to follow the Edwin Lewis, and in attempting to do his vessel was ordered on right into St. Auberpee river, at a point about two miles above the mouth of Mosquito creek. This creek, at all [illegible] of the Charleston & Savannah Railroad, is crossed but once up the river by a distance of two miles from the railroad bridge, and it was not until she had passed her course up the river a distance of [illegible] miles that she was hailed back.

On hailing the vessel about three hundred men, including the officers and crew of the vessel, were found on the bank. The Edwin Lewis, on her return from up the river, discovered the situation of affairs, and came about to pull her off, but in so doing she ran hard and fast on the bar, and from information that she was hailed back.

On Tuesday there were no operations, and on Wednesday, the rebels made an attempt to dislodge our sharpshooters and were easily driven back. A half-past four on Friday morning advanced six whole line and made it up to his own honour and contract [illegible] taking no decided advantage."

Some words with McClellan's bombardiers from the same locality.

No decided advantage until Lee's head. Night closed in with our fifty yards from the enemy's battle of the campaign opened [illegible] to storm for the loan of [illegible].

Whether it will prove decisive [illegible] of question. If it shall [illegible] its fortifications much will be accomplished and the story of [illegible] will be repeated.
